

In the 4 seasons, people can experience the different seasons of nature. Different platforms offer seating in a square which is filled with different textures / materials representing each season. People suffering from mental disorder have different moods and needs. Therefore it is important to offer the patient a non-static environment, just like nature itself.

"The movement of leaves, the ever-changing angle and color of sunset, wind currents on the ocean, the direction of waves provide just enough stimulation to prevent from boredom"
Nature is seen as a high therapeutic tool.

The one-to-one rooms have two different functions.

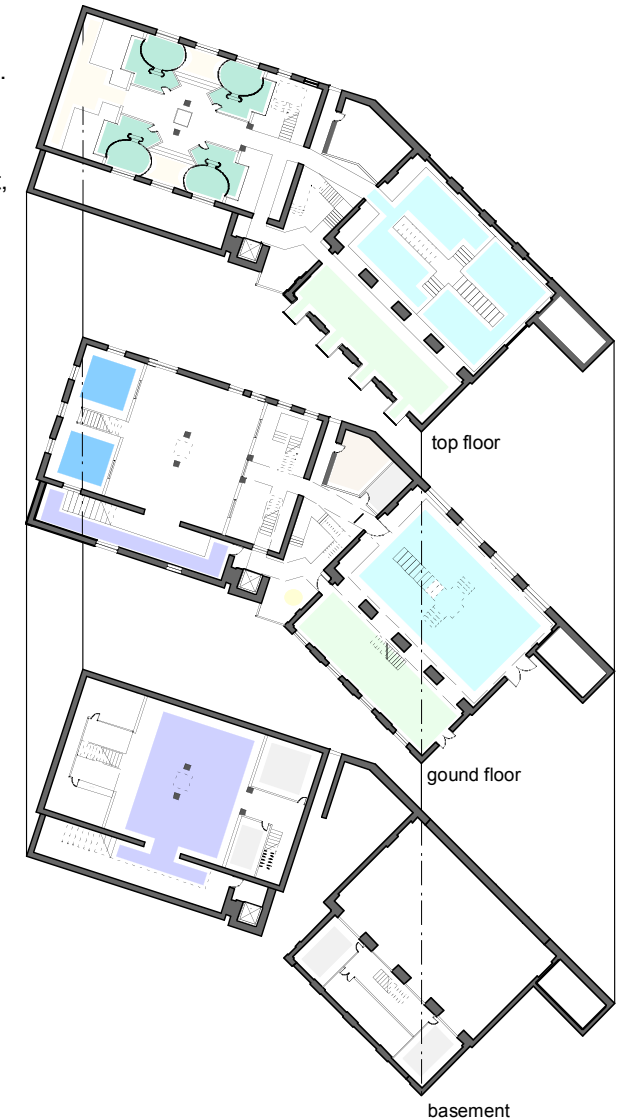

Function 1: office space (for the therapist)

Function 2: consulting area

The consulting area is located by a big window allowing a view outside. The rooms are in a round shape that represents the womb,-rebirth.

The one-to-one rooms are isolated from the public area, yet allowing insights to link them to the community.

People suffering mental disorder experience a high level of creativity. By painting, sculpturing and writing people often express their true inner feelings without even realizing it. Art is seen as a powerful tool to support the process of recovery.

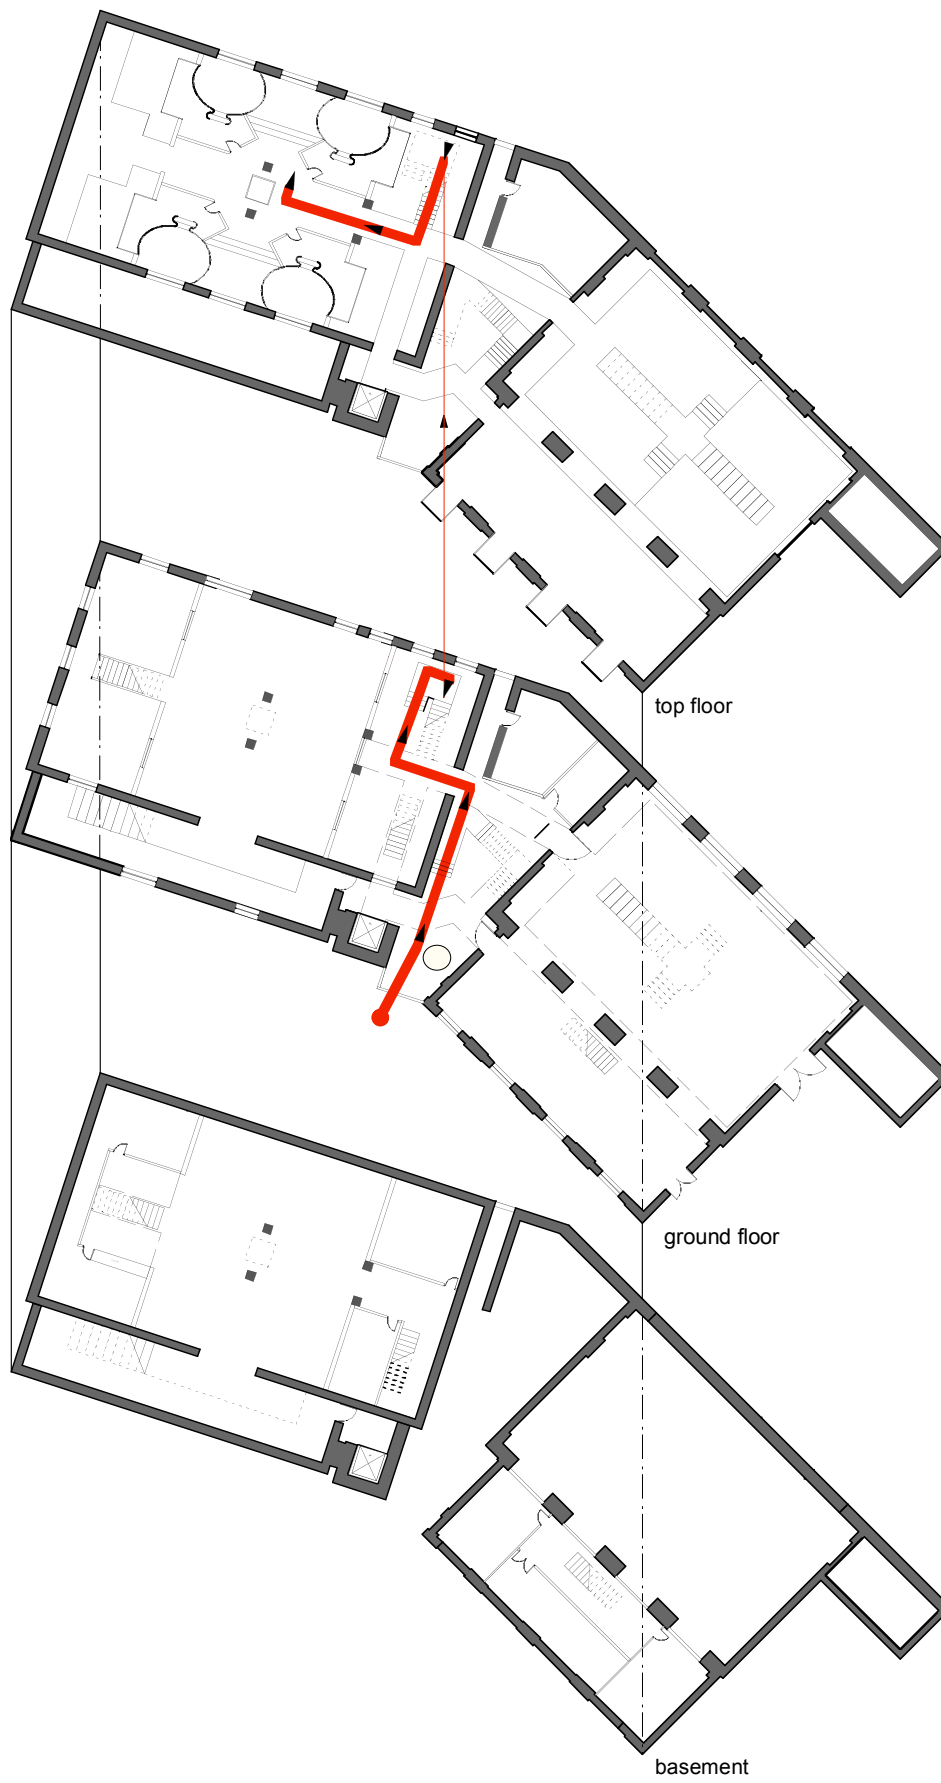

Corridors and circulation areas provide a number of alternative routes around the building allowing people to meet or avoid each other as they wish.

It is important to be able to see what and who is in the next space before committing oneself to participate in the social situation
