

Unrealised Potential

ARTIST: Little Artists (Darren Neave & John Cake)

TITLE: Here is our dream show, hope you like!

Outline of Unrealised Potential

The Little Artists, Cake & Neave, will simultaneously exhibit their art in shows at the world's most prestigious galleries and museums, the Prado, the Guggenheims, the Pompidou Centre, Tate Modern, and the Uffizi. They will ultimately be the most hyped, debated and celebrated shows within the history of art; a new wave of sensationalism is to sweep through every nation.

The people will congregate from every part of everywhere and queue for days in every city, galleries will need to open permanently, and previous attendance records will pale into insignificance. Critics will be united in their praise; the newspapers will publish special editions in honour of the most beautiful, awe-inspiring collections of masterpieces ever created at the hands of human beings. Leading artists would need to announce their retirements, yet the sheer brilliance and virtuosity will touch the souls of millions and mark a new epoch of creativity.

The flair and mastery will overpower onlookers, reaching new heights of emotion and elation, tears will flow and people of every creed will fall to their knees. Angels too will weep in the heavens above. The artists will become new Gods. The merchandise will be at the top of everybody's Christmas lists.
